

How should we tap the experience of the Bamboo community?

How should we tap the experience of the Bamboo community?

Description

At the end of the Workshop One series, over 100 institutions and organizations and 330 people contributed to the discussion at face-to-face workshops. One of the greatest challenges facing the project is how do we tap the collective expertise and experience of our community. In a smaller project, it is fairly easy to tap single individuals, a set of institutions, or a group of experts but in the case of Bamboo, the scale is two to three times greater than we anticipated and indications are that interest will continue to grow. Are there models we should consider for structuring participation and leadership in the project? What works and what doesn't? What should we avoid? Are there examples we should explore?

We invite you to add your comments below and as always, please keep Project Bamboo's Community Design Guidelines in mind, as stated in How to use this site.

Add your thoughts, ideas, and comments here by editing this page.

Back to Consortial Models...